

News articles summarizing statistical research don't usually show two-way tables. That said, a news story often provides information that could be expressed in a two-way table.

1. Using the internet, find an article that discusses a relationship between two variables that could be expressed in a two-way table.

2. In PowerPoint or Excel, create the table.

Submit your table, as well as a link to the article, for credit.