

International regulatory action has produced reductions in CFCs, but other transboundary pollution issues, including acid deposition, have not yet been addressed as effectively. What types of actions do you feel are appropriate for pollutants that cross political boundaries?