

Respond to the following question in at least 200 words: "The Art of War" and "The Prince" take different views on how to dominate and extend one's sphere of influence. Which of the two books do you feel would best address leadership issues in your workplace? Why? Do you think the lessons in "The Art of War" and "The Prince" are valuable to today's leaders? Should we assume the lessons from these books are still applicable?
